Our approach to weddings is the new “Photo Journalistic” style, which allows the bride and groom to truly enjoy their wedding day. We still capture formal shots of the wedding party, and we make sure to get the professional portraits of the bride and groom that you will come to treasure. Beyond that, however, we let you fully experience your special day while we stay off to the side, blending in with the background, taking those all important candid and action shots as they happen naturally. Our photos will tell your story over and over again for generations to come, and your album will become a family heirloom.

When the reception is over, we head back to the studio to edit and polish the many hundreds of photos collected during the weekend. Each image that we select gets individual attention in the digital darkroom, perfecting exposure, color, clarity, and cropping. We’ll even put together the draft design of your wedding album for your review. Within 1-3 weeks, we can be ready to present the final package, including all finished images and the proposed album layout.

When you choose In The Zone Images, you will be able to determine the cost of our services up front, with no hidden or follow-on charges. Give us a call today to setup your appointment.
